"The heart trouble that afflicts Louise is physical, but it is also a symbolic" element."

Justify the above assertion considering the context of the story as well as what the teacher explains in the video class .

NOTE: Answer in English. Around 70 and 50 words.

Louise's heart trouble operates on two levels. Physically is a medical condition that makes her fragile and ultimately causes her death. Symbolically, her "heart trouble" represents her emotional unhappiness within marriage, constrained by her lack of freedom. And her fatal heart attack is ironically not from grief, but from the shock of losing that newfound freedom, when seeing her presumedly dead husband standing very well and alive.

The theme of Chopin's short story can be:

1. Fate and free will in marital relationships.
2. Loneliness in marriages as a destructive force.
3. Oppression of women in patriarchal society.

Choose one of the above possibilities and justify why it evidently is a pertinent theme of Chopin's narrative in "The story of an hour".

NOTE: Around 100 and 80 words and in English.

The question of marital relationships is very clear in Chopin's narrative in "The Story of an Hour", as Louise Mallard faces the realization of her own freedom after learning of her husband's death. Her moment of joy suggests that her life had been constrained by societal expectations and her marriage, as showed on the thoughts of her newfound sense of liberation, expressing the complex interplay between destiny and personal feelings within the confines of a "loving not-abusive relationship" in a restrictive patriarchal society.
